digital repositories and online collaborative networks have significantly reduced manual effort while increasing analytical accuracy. At the same time, the emergence of internet-based research environments, digital libraries, and open access initiatives has democratized access to knowledge, enabling scholars from diverse geographical and institutional backgrounds to participate in global research communities. This book presents a structured exploration of computer applications within research methodology. It begins by examining the role of computers in various phases of the research process, including conceptualization, planning, empirical investigation, and data analysis. It further discusses quantitative and qualitative software tools, digital data management systems, and the creation of tables and graphical representations. Special emphasis is placed on internet-based research academic networks such as INFLIBNET and ERNET and digital learning platforms including MOOCs and SWAYAM, which have expanded access to scholarly resources and collaborative opportunities. While highlighting the transformative role of technology, this text also underscores the importance of critical thinking, ethical responsibility, and methodological competence. Computers enhance research efficiency, but they do not replace intellectual judgment. The responsible use of digital tools, adherence to academic integrity, data privacy, and source evaluation remain essential components of sound research practice. Designed for undergraduate and postgraduate students, research scholars, and educators, this book aims to bridge theoretical understanding with practical application. By integrating conceptual clarity with contemporary digital developments, it seeks to equip readers with the knowledge and skills necessary to navigate the technologically driven research environment of the twenty-first century. It is hoped that this work will serve as a comprehensive guide for learners embarking on academic research and as a valuable reference for those seeking to strengthen their competence in computer-assisted research methodologies.
