What are the differences between Clustered and Unclustered Lookup?

The differences are explained in the below table:

Clustered Lookup	Unclustered Lookup
Clustered lookup performs an iterative scan across the entire table. It is the slowest.	Unclustered lookup performs a single scan from the start to the end of the partition in parallel.
Clustered lookup can use table compression and table cache.	Unclustered lookup can't use table cache or compression.
Clustered lookup can't take table skew into account when it is skewed.	Unclustered lookup can take table skew into account when it is skewed.
Clustered lookup handles all table compression.	Unclustered lookup handles only the storage layer part of the compression and not the query.
Supports multi-column range queries (i.e. range for column when column conditions are not specified).	Does not support any column range queries.

What is meant by active and passive transformation?

Active transformation is the one that writes the row of the table/query table.

1. Change the content of each record transformed input and output. Example: Row transformation.
2. Change the transformed knowledge by shifting content of columns, joining, creating transformed column transformation.
3. Change the row type. Example: Update column to active because it flags the row for insert, delete, update or report.
