The ITIL guiding principles

Guiding principle	Description
Focus on value	Everything that the organization does needs to create, directly or indirectly, a benefit to the organization. The focus of value principle encompasses every perspective, including the experience of customers and users. Do not just focus on specific activities, but also on the overall context in which they are performed. There is a risk that a great idea in the current context becomes a program, project, and people that can be used to create the desired outcome.
Start where you are	The current state should be investigated and assessed, taking into account what is already in use. Do not attempt to do everything at once. Start high, then gradually reduce complexity as you go. By organizing work into smaller, manageable pieces that can be completed and completed in a timely manner, you can maintain a strategic focus on each effort.
Progress iteratively with feedback	Work in small, frequent, and often visible increments of work that allow you to focus and adapt. Iterate, learn, improve, change. Working together on work that has a common goal, but with different goals, can lead to a shared, and increased, understanding of long-term outcomes.
Collaborate and promote visibility	Working together across different departments, and local, global, and cross-functional, can lead to a shared, and increased, understanding of long-term outcomes.

Achieving value: costs

Real risks

Achieving desired outcomes requires resources (and therefore costs) and other associated with loss. Service providers help their customers to address outcomes and to design or take on some of the associated risks and costs. On the other hand, service relationships can introduce new risks and costs, and in some cases, can negatively affect some of the intended outcomes after supporting others.
