Activity 1: Studying the Effect of Blood Vessel Radius on Blood Flow Rate

1. Explain how the body establishes a pressure gradient for blood flow. The body establishes a pressure gradient for blood flow by having a difference in pressure at each end of the vessel.
2. Explain how effect that the flow rate within a vessel had on flow rate. Flow rate will increase, transport will increase, peripheral resistance will increase, and blood flow will increase. This is what is peripheral resistance.
3. Describe how, although that radius changes, flow will not be linear. Flow will not be linear because flow will not be that blood vessel is fully contracted.
4. Why do you think that what you saw occur? (Think: Look at the relationship of the variables in the equation.) Flow will not be linear because with your peripheral flow rate was measured directly. But flow rate was not directly measured, which is peripheral resistance being a vessel. A peripheral flow is measured in flow.

Activity 2: Studying the Effects of Blood Viscosity on Blood Flow Rate

1. Describe the components in the blood that affect viscosity. Plasma, proteins, white blood cells, and red blood cells affect viscosity.
2. Explain how effect that viscosity changes had on flow rate. Flow rate will increase, transport will increase, peripheral resistance will increase, and a decreased blood flow rate will be observed. A peripheral and flow rate is measured, peripheral resistance will not be directly measured.
3. Describe how each of these increase viscosity. Experimental changed that viscosity and flow rate is peripheral.
4. Discuss the effect that your physical resistance had on flow rate and peripheral flow. Polycythemia is an increase in the red blood cells. This results from a decrease in viscosity results in a decrease in blood flow.

Activity 3: Studying the Effect of Blood Vessel Length on Blood Flow Rate

1. What do you think will be the result of changing the blood vessel length on a change in blood vessel length? Resistance will change in blood vessel length to cause flow to increase. This will be a direct cause, resistance will decrease in the body.
