

Barbarian Invasions

The period known as the Middle Ages began with the fall of the Roman Empire in the latter part of the fifth century. This fall took place gradually, resulting in a completely different way of life in Western Europe.

Until the third century A.D., the Roman Empire, for the most part, was at peace. Its government was stable, and its citizens were prosperous and productive. Rome's policy of expansion, however, caused the empire to grow so large that it was difficult for Rome to govern the entire region. Taxes skyrocketed, morals declined, and the government grew corrupt. These factors made the empire weak and vulnerable to invasions by barbarian tribes to the north.

As the Roman Empire grew weaker, Germanic tribes north of the Rhine and Danube rivers began to invade it. They had chipped away at the fringes of the empire for many years, and in the third and fourth centuries they moved deeper into the area. Finally, they conquered the city of Rome itself in 476, and the great Roman Empire came to an end.

The barbarians that conquered Rome had little respect for learning and culture. They plundered and set fires at will, destroying libraries and works of art. The central government collapsed, and roads and bridges fell into ruin. Organized society as the Romans knew it disappeared, and a period known as the Dark Ages descended upon Europe. Out of this social disorder and confusion came the beginning of a new economic, social, and political system known as feudalism. Under feudalism, people offered their services to powerful lords in return for protection and land. Feudalism became more solidly established throughout Europe four hundred years later after the death of Charlemagne. Charlemagne had been the only Germanic ruler powerful enough to maintain some type of law and order in Europe.

Children's Books in Print, 2007, 2006 From Sacrament to Contract, Second Edition John Witte Jr., 2012-01-31 This newly revised and enlarged edition of John Witte's authoritative historical study explores the interplay of law, theology, and marriage in the Western tradition. Witte uncovers the core beliefs that formed the theological genetic code of Western marriage and family law. He explores the systematic models of marriage developed by Catholics, Lutherans, Calvinists, Anglicans, and Enlightenment thinkers, and the transformative influence of each model on Western marriage law. In addition, he traces the millennium-long reduction of marriage from a complex spiritual, social, contractual, and natural institution into a simple private contract with freedom of entrance, exercise, and exit for husband and wife alike. This second edition updates and expands each chapter and the bibliography. It also includes three new chapters on classical biblical and patristic sources.

The Best of Desktop Publishing Steven Heller, Elinor Pettit, 1996 Farmers and Ironsmiths Rob Atkins, Aileen Connor, 2010 Important evidence for occupation spanning the late 1st century Early Roman to the 9th century Middle Saxon was found by CAM ARC now Oxford Archaeology East in 2002 The initial phase of a Roman farmstead consisted of fragmentary evidence for a ditched field system and livestock enclosures the layout being altered throughout the Roman period Barns trackways wells and rubbish dumps were also evident with environmental and artefactual evidence pointing to a predominantly pastoral economy Both pottery and metalwork imply continuity of settlement at the site from the Roman to the Anglo Saxon periods Early Saxon activity of the 5th 6th centuries is attested by seven sunken featured buildings a possible hall ovens pits and a contracted or crouched burial Most of the buildings were deliberately set around a rectangular space perhaps representing an extended family grouping within a much larger settlement After a possible hiatus the site was again used in the Middle Saxon period The field boundary ditches were replaced by a large enclosure containing a post hole building and another oven Metalwork and associated debris in the backfill of an earlier building and nearby pit attest to ferrous working possibly including steel production and the gathering of scrap metal for recycling The site evidently formed part of a Middle Saxon settlement such as a large village engaged in craft activities and perhaps providing a local market Its eventual abandonment was probably a result of the defeat of King Edmund at Thetford in 869 and subsequent settlement changes under Danish occupancy

Small Communities Andrew A. S. Newton, 2018 Excavation of a site on river gravels in the Cam Granta valley by Archaeological Solutions Ltd took place in advance of gravel extraction and construction of a reservoir The excavation revealed five phases of archaeological activity beginning in the Neolithic period with evidence for episodic or seasonal occupation and burial After a gap of several centuries there were three phases of Middle Iron Age to early Roman activity representing the continuous development of the same system of enclosures focussed on a central trackway Domestic occupation was also evident in the form of partial ring gullies During the Conquest period there was probably a landing site for boats operating on the former river channel evident at the site Economic activity during these phases represents a mixed surplus generating economy and it is possible that river traffic played an important role in the trade of the agricultural surplus Limited finds of later Roman artefacts indicate a continued Romano British presence in the vicinity The final phase of occupation is a small rural Anglo Saxon settlement comprising seven sunken featured buildings and associated pits Environmental and soil micromorphological analysis from this phase has provided important information about the internal arrangement of SFBs and the processes associated with development of their fills

Iron Age Fen-edge Settlement at Black Horse Farm, Sawtry, Cambridgeshire Andrew A. S. Newton, 2018 Black Horse Farm is situated on the Cambridgeshire fen edge During the Iron Age and early Romano British period it occupied a low promontory reaching out into the surrounding wetland This volume describes the archaeological excavation of the site and the Iron Age settlement and Romano British activity that was recorded there The wetland of the fen would have been a prominent part of everyday life at Black Horse Farm and the book examines the way in which the site's inhabitants utilised and exploited it Fluctuations between dry and damp conditions were also a prominent aspect of life at this marginal location and the later sections examine how the population responded to these conditions The book examines themes including the organisation of space within the roundhouse the role of ditches and banks as flood defences versus their social and defensive function and offers alternative interpretations for some commonly observed features at contemporary sites With contributions by Beta Analytic Inc Jane Cowgill Nina Crummy Julia E Cussans Val Fryer Andrew Peachey Ruth Pelling Carina Phillips Rob Scaife and Maisie Taylor Illustrations by Kathren Henry Charlotte Davies and Caroline George
