COMPASSION OF STUDENT EVALUATIONS OF TEACHING 4

Located in a single academic department, we gathered SET data on a large sample of courses (26 = 364) that included instructors from all colleges and all course levels over 3 years. We controlled for individual differences in instructors by limiting the sample to courses taught by the same instructor in all 3 years. The university offers nearly 30% of course sections online in any given term, and these courses have always administered online SETs. This allowed us to examine the combined effects of changing the method of delivery for SETs (paper-based to online) for traditional classes and changing from a mixed method of administering SETs (paper for traditional classes and online for online classes in the first 2 years of data gathered) to uniform use of online forms for all classes in the final year of data collection.

Response rates and evaluation ratings were differentiated by college and course evaluation data. The archive of SET data did not include information about personal characteristics of the instructor (gender, age, or years of teaching experience), and students were not provided with any systematic incentive to complete the paper or online versions of the SET. We extracted data on response rates and evaluation ratings for 30 (2011, 2013, 2014) instructors (2 beginning undergraduate level (2nd- and 3rd-year students), 20% courses (24%) at the advanced undergraduate level (3rd- and 4th-year students), and 5% courses (4%) at the graduate level.

Instrument

The course evaluation instrument was a set of 28 items developed by the state university system. The first eight items were designed to measure the quality of the instructor, concluding with a global rating of instructor quality (Item 8: "Overall assessment of instructor"). The remaining items asked students to evaluate components of the course, concluding with a global rating of course organization (Item 28: "Overall, I would rate the course organization"). The formal data on the psychometric properties of the items are available, although all items have obvious face validity. Students were asked to rate each instrument item, from 0 (1), poor (2), very poor (3), or excellent (4) in response to each item. Evaluation ratings were subsequently calculated for each course and instructor. A median rating was computed when an instructor taught more than one section of a course during a term.

The institution limited our access to SET data for the 3 years of data requested. We obtained scores for Item 8 ("Overall assessment of instructor") for all 3 years but could obtain scores for Item 28 ("Overall, I would rate the course organization") only for Year 3. We computed the correlation between scores on Item 8 and Item 28 (from course data recorded in the 3rd year only) to estimate the internal consistency of the application instrument. These two items, which serve as composite summaries of preceding items (Item 8 for Items 1-7 and Item 28 for Items 9-27), were strongly related, r(164) = .88. Fekken and Rubin (2006) also reported strong correlations between global items in a large analysis of SET responses.

Design

This study took advantage of a natural experiment created when the university decided to administer all course evaluations online. We requested SET data for the fall semesters for 3 years

The ESL Writer's Handbook, 2nd Ed. Janine Carlock,Maeve Eberhardt,Jaime

Horst, Lionel Menasche, 2017-12-20 The ESL Writer's Handbook is a reference work for ESL students who are taking college level courses. Because its purpose is to provide help with the broad variety of writing questions students may have when working on school assignments, the text focuses on English for Academic Purposes. Unlike other handbooks on the market, this book's sole purpose is to address the issues of second language learners. The spiral bound Handbook complements a student writer's dictionary, thesaurus, and grammar reference book. It would be suitable as a text for an advanced ESL writing course when used together with the companion Workbook. 978 0 472 03726 1. The new edition features significant revisions to Sections 3 and 4; in particular, both APA and MLA style guides have been updated, and new sample papers for each are included. The new edition includes new and revised exercises and many new samples of student writing. Like its predecessor, the 2nd Edition has these special features: The topic selection is based on ESL writers' needs as observed by the authors over many years. The coverage of topics is more complete than the limited amount usually provided for ESL writers in first language or L1 handbooks. The explanatory language is appropriate for ESL students, in contrast to the more complex and idiomatic language of other English handbooks. Many of the examples of paragraphs, essays, research papers, and exercise sentences were written by ESL students to help users realize that they too can become effective writers. Research
